This paper assumes that poverty is not just lack of income and productive assets. Poverty is also a trap, a combination of poverty burden, fragility, impowermence, physical weakness, and alienation. To empower the poor families, capital aid package is not sufficient. This paper suggests that the poor families should be empowered by a more basic policy, which is a people-oriented anti-poverty policy.